

Taxes equal to 51% of Israel's GNP as IS278b levied

Jerusalem Post Reporter
The total sum paid in taxes in the financial year just concluded was the equivalent of 51 per cent of the gross national product. The previous year, the proportion was 44 per cent. This was learned from figures given at a press conference yesterday by the tax authorities to mark the end of the fiscal year.

The taxation rate rose mainly because of the IS37 billion in new taxes resulting from the war in Lebanon, while there was a virtual standstill of the GNP over the past year.

In the 1982/83 fiscal year, tax revenue amounted to IS278 billion, as compared with a GNP of IS548b. The tax authorities failed this year to increase tax collection, and without the new taxes this year's tax revenue might have been lower than last year's.

Tax revenue increased partly because of the growth in private consumption and the increase in imports, especially imports on which there are high taxes, such as cars and video sets.

Some 64,000 cars were imported during the past year — as compared with 53,000 the year before. Some 90,000 video sets were brought in this year as compared with 25,000 the previous year.

These two import items brought the Treasury IS16.5 billion in taxes. Moshe Bartov, the director of the State Revenue Administration, conceded that the high taxation level was especially difficult for those who paid their taxes in full. He maintained that levying taxes more efficiently now would allow a cut in taxes in the future.

Bartov said that collecting the Lebanon war tax was difficult and cumbersome.

Mordechai Bareket, director of the Customs and Excise Department, added that the introduction of the new travel tax has gone smoothly, but 14 passengers missed flights because they had failed to pay the tax. There were complaints among Israelis living abroad about the tax, he said.

Gaps narrowing in Lebanon talks

One month is now the estimate offered by highly placed Israeli sources seen confident now that the accord is at hand, and their optimism seems to be shared by the Lebanese and the Americans. U.S. special envoy Philip Habib was quoted yesterday as saying that he was impressed by the progress being made in the tripartite negotiations.

But the highly placed Israeli sources seen confident now that the accord is at hand, and their optimism seems to be shared by the Lebanese and the Americans. U.S. special envoy Philip Habib was quoted yesterday as saying that he was impressed by the progress being made in the tripartite negotiations.

Looking beyond the agreement itself, however, Israeli sources express some anxiety over its implementation, given that the withdrawal from Lebanon will require Syrian participation — and therefore, presumably, Soviet cooperation.

Habib took part in the tripartite talks for the first time yesterday. With his deputy, Morris Draper, back in Washington for consultations, the special envoy sat at the head of the American delegation at Netanya. Today, after an early-morning meeting with Prime Minister Menachem Begin, he will fly to Haifa to attend another round of the talks before going on to Beirut for talks with leaders there.

At a meeting with Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir yesterday evening, Habib praised the efficient method in which the negotiations were conducted and spoke favourably, according to Israeli sources, of the progress he had witnessed at Netanya.

Shamir also expressed satisfaction at the advances that had been made recently. He said that the negotiators had drawn up a precise inventory of still unresolved issues — and these now had to be tackled with vigour.

Two of these issues — the future of Maj. Sa'ad Haddad and the role of UNIFIL in South Lebanon — were apparently not touched on at Netanya yesterday. But Shamir stressed once again to Habib that Israel wants Haddad to be in command of the Lebanese Army brigade to be deployed in the south, as it attaches vital importance to its remaining in a position of authority in the security zone.

U.S. seeks way around PLO barrier

By WOLF BLITZER
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — Secretary of State George Shultz yesterday called on moderate Palestinians to accept Jordan's involvement in the peace negotiations. Barring that, he told a State Department news conference, the Arab world should consider revising the 1974 Rabat decision naming the PLO the sole representative of the Palestinians.

Shultz insisted that the president's September 1 peace initiative is still "on the high ground" and that the U.S. has no intention of abandoning it.

Shultz continued to express confidence that moderate Arabs would eventually come around to join the U.S.-sponsored negotiations.

"We are determined to stick with this," Shultz declared. But the secretary did not offer any specific steps in the next U.S. efforts to sell the Reagan peace initiative.

"Sometimes it may be best to keep quiet for a while," Shultz said, adding that he has no immediate plans to visit the Middle East.

Shultz flatly rejected any increased U.S. pressure on Israel, insisting, as he often has in the past that the objective of peace alone should be enough of an incentive to achieve progress in the negotiations.

Regarding the troop-withdrawal negotiation in Lebanon, Shultz said: "A great deal of headway has been made." He noted that all sides are impatient in the dragging talks, but that the issues are very serious and that further efforts are necessary to reach an agreement.

Earlier President Reagan urged "radical elements" in the Arab world to reconsider their opposition to allowing Jordan's King Hussein to join the U.S.-sponsored peace process.

"As we speak now, radical elements are seeking to prevent an agreement which would permit King Hussein to join the peace process talks," Reagan said in welcoming Sultan Qaboos bin Said of Oman to the White House.

The president warned that Palestinians face only two clear-cut choices: "status quo and the continued frustration of the peoples or making a bold and courageous move to break the deadlock."

Reagan pledged again to remain firm in his September 1 Middle East peace initiative, despite Sunday's announcement that Hussein would not enter the talks.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters yesterday that the president remains hopeful that progress could still be achieved. "The administration view is that there is considerable hope and opportunity for progress," Speakes said.

Reagan, at the White House welcoming ceremony for Qaboos, said: "For our part, we will not permit the forces of violence and terror to exercise a veto over the peace process." He added: "I can assure you, we will spare no effort to put an end to the killing and to put this dreadful chapter in the Middle East to a conclusion acceptable to all sides."

Reagan criticized the Soviet Union's recent policies in the Middle East. Contrasting U.S. policy toward the region with that of "another superpower," he asserted the U.S. seeks to promote its security interests through "peace and stability and to deter aggression."

Reagan said the U.S. would not be deterred in its search for an Arab-Israeli peace based on UN Security Council Resolution 242 and the Camp David accords.

Earlier in the day, Reagan telephoned Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, who is visiting Pakistan, to consult on the best steps in advancing the peace process following Hussein's apparent refusal to move without the backing of the PLO.

At the State Department, officials insisted that Hussein and Saudi King Fahd had not replied with an absolute "No" to Reagan in their own telephone conversations with him over the past 48 hours.

"We are determined to go forward with the September 1 initiative," said State Department spokesman John Hughes. "King Hussein and King Fahd share our resolve."

Hughes said Reagan, based on those telephone conversations, is "confident that the process is going forward. He is confident they have not given up."

Eitan's Knesset farewell includes poem to Sarid

By SARAH HONIG
Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The answer to Arab stone-throwing in Judea and Samaria "should be 10 new Jewish settlements for each such incident," outgoing Chief of Staff Rav-Aluf Rafael Eitan recommended yesterday in his farewell meeting with the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defence Committee.

According to some sources, he also said, "When we have settled the land, all the Arabs will be able to do about it will be to scurry around like doped roaches in a bottle."

Eitan and Labour Party dove Yossi Sarid engaged in an acrimonious exchange, calling each other "liar." Eitan also read what was described as a vitriolic poem dedicated to Sarid.

Eitan told the committee that he sees no reason why stone-throwing incidents in Judea and Samaria cannot be stopped. "All we need to do is carry on with our settlement effort and increase it. When 100 settlements are established between Nablus and Jerusalem, there will be no stones thrown at Jews there."

According to some sources, it was here that Eitan added: "We will create the facts, the settlements will be established and all the Arabs can do about it is scurry around like roaches." According to another version emanating from committee members, the chief of staff spoke about Arabs "scurrying around like doped roaches in a bottle."

Others on the committee had no recollection of these comments. Likud MKs Yigael Hurvitz and Benny Shalita recommended that in the event of any more stone-throwing incidents, soldiers be instructed to fire at the rioters legs.

"We have seen that the stones are lethal weapons that kill, but those who use them will be encouraged to resort to such means if they go unpunished. Perhaps after an incident or two in which shots are fired, they will rethink their actions. Otherwise the incidents will spread. We have already had stone-throwing in Galilee," Shalita said.

The altercation between Eitan and Sarid developed when the chief of staff objected to criticism of him for reducing the sentences of soldiers accused of killing PoWs in the Litani Operation. Eitan argued that his critics were "very selective in their outrage. When the accused (Continued on back page)

Peace Now 'settles' in protest

By DAVID RICHARDSON
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Peace Now, borrowing a leaf from their arch-rivals Gush Emunim, yesterday established a settlement near Ma'ashat Bracha south of Nablus to protest the intended handing over to civilians of the Nahal settlement there on Independence Day next week. The intended hand-over would be the first step in the construction of a Jewish quarter close to the largest Arab city in the West Bank.

Some 30 Peace Now activists arrived there early yesterday afternoon and set up tents inside a compound surrounded by barbed wire. They also brought along a generator to light up a large sign declaring "No Annexation."

Other placards the group have placed around the encampment — which lies close to the main road to Nablus — read: "A curse to the Jewish people on the hill of blessing" (Mt. Bracha) and "With Upper Nablus Israel is saying no to peace." The army and police are on hand and have closed off the area. Army officers demanded that the settlers leave, but have not taken any action so far.

The Peace Now "settlers" intend to bolster their numbers and to remain in place until Independence Day to try and hamper the scheduled ceremony. Gush Emunim settlement activists hope the prime minister will proclaim there the establishment of the civilian suburb of Upper Nablus. Fifteen civilian settlers are due to move into the military outpost on Independence Day to start what Gush Emunim hopes will become another Jewish suburb like Kiryat Arba outside Hebron.

MK Haim Druckman yesterday called on the Peace Now activists to stay at their settlement, not only until Independence Day, and to join the new settlement there. They will be received with open arms, he said.

Terrorists' homes sealed near Hebron

Security forces have sealed two homes in Dahariya belonging to five members of a terrorist cell who they have admitted responsibility for number of attacks in the Hebron area. The attacks included the rock-throwing which resulted in the death of Esther Ohana in January, IDF spokesman announced yesterday.

Dahariya, a large town partly occupied by refugees, straddles the road between Beersheba and Hebron. The town has been under Jewish military control since the 1967 war. The town has been under Jewish military control since the 1967 war. The town has been under Jewish military control since the 1967 war.

WASHINGTON. — Soviet military intelligence analysts as saying that the Russians are military officers who are experts in mountain tank warfare. The Russians were said to travel in groups of 12.

"There is some confusion among Lebanese and western analysts about just why the Russians have come here, so far west," wrote David Ignatius, the Journal's Middle East correspondent. "There isn't any evidence, they say, that the Soviets are building surveillance facilities or other military installations. Perhaps, says one Western diplomat, 'They may be there to be seen.'"

Lebanese villagers said, "The Russians appeared to be gathering information about the tank and artillery battles that took place here last summer — and probably planning strategy for any future battles."

PLO wants to keep talking to Jordan

Post Middle East Affairs Reporter
and agencies

The Palestine Liberation Organization yesterday called for continued relations and dialogue with Jordan, in its first official response to King Hussein's decision on Sunday to opt out of the Middle East peace process for the time being.

In a statement carried by the organizations news agency Wafa, the PLO strenuously denied Jordanian charges that Yasser Arafat had gone back on an agreement with Hussein after consulting with his colleagues, noting that the PLO leader had made it plain to the king all along that President Ronald Reagan's plan did not provide a suitable basis for negotiations.

The statement noted that both sides in the talks lacked confidence in Washington's ability or willingness to press Israel into loosening its hold on occupied Arab lands.

In Islamabad, where he stopped over yesterday on the last leg of his Asian tour before returning to Cairo, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak warned the PLO that time was running out for it if it still hoped to keep the U.S. initiative alive.

Settlement campaign is launched

3,939 homes in the areas up for sale

By LEA LEVAVI
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The best Israeli answer to Jordan King Hussein's decision not to join the peace talks is for thousands of Israelis to settle in Judea, Samaria and Gaza, Deputy Labour and Social Affairs Minister Benzion Rubin told reporters here yesterday.

At a press conference previewing a campaign to attract thousands of families to these areas, Rubin said that the public interest so far leads him to believe that there will be between 10,000 and 15,000 families interested in the 3,939 apartments and "build-your-own-home" plots now available.

The project will begin with interviews of interested families at Kfar Hamaacabish from May 10 to May 16. This will be followed by organized tours to the settlements. Rubin said this is the largest project of its kind ever undertaken by the government, Jewish Agency and the settlement (kibbutz and moshav) movements. Geographically, it will include Judea, Samaria, the southern part of Mount Hebron, Katif in the Gaza strip — and the Jordan Valley.

Prices of the flats vary widely from IS1 million to IS3m, according to size and location. Special mortgages and loans will be available of up to IS860,000.

Zohar Gindel, director of the Centre for Development Towns, said there will also be efforts to attract entrepreneurs to open firms in these areas, to create employment opportunities for the new settlers.

Yisrael Harel, representing the Council of Settlements in Judea, Samaria and Gaza, said he hopes the goal of 100,000 settlers will be reached a year before the end of the government's term. There are already about 30,000 residents in the territories he said, another 15,000 are expected to move in this summer, and the campaign is expected to bring about another 20,000 within the next 18 months.

He believes the next jump from 60,000 to 100,000 will come quickly in view of rising public interest, whether for ideological reasons or to improve housing and quality of life.

David Rudge adds:

The bulk of the Electric Corporation's massive project supplying electricity to Samaria has been completed after four years of work and at a cost of IS360 million.

Nineteen Arab towns and villages and 15 Jewish settlements have so far been linked to the national grid. A further 16 Arab villages and 10 Jewish settlements are expected to be connected in the near future.

The necessity of having electricity had overcome Arab political objections to the source of supply, the Electric Corporation's Jerusalem district manager, Paul Schaffer, told reporters during a tour of Samaria yesterday.

Electricity to the region is supplied by three separate high-voltage power lines covering a total of 180 kilometres, which have been built since the project was started in 1979.

The Electric Corporation is in the process of building three new kinds of transformer sub-stations, which will boost the high voltage supply to the region even more.

HOME NEWS

More unemployed now than at beginning of the year

Jerusalem Post Staff

The number of unemployed has risen since the beginning of the year and the most severely affected are women and unskilled workers, the Bank of Israel's Research Department reported yesterday.

The number of those seeking work went up by 4.8 per cent, while those without work for seven days or more rose by 9.4 per cent.

On the average, the number of those seeking work on any one day rose by 8.9 per cent, statistics of the Employment Service show. Among the unskilled, this figure has reached 24,000, but among the skilled, it has dropped to 8,200 from 10,000.

March, however, showed a peak figure of over 64,000 Arabs from Judea, Samaria and the Gaza Strip working inside the Green Line, as compared to February when the number was over 62,800. These statistics, also released by the Employment Service, compare with the monthly average of over 53,700 during 1982.

The number of unemployed in the Galilee has soared to 3,000, 2,500 more than at the end of last year, Galilee Council chairman Menahem Ariav said yesterday.

Ariav who is also Mayor of Upper Nazareth, told The Jerusalem Post that unemployment has particularly hit his city, Beit Shean, Tiberias and Migdal Ha'emek.

Panel blocks price rise to snub Aridor

Post Economic Reporter

The Knesset Finance Committee yesterday refused to approve proposed price hikes for electricity and telephone services, in a pointed protest against Finance Minister Yoram Aridor's absence from the country.

The leader of the Alignment faction on the committee, MK Adi Amori, bitterly attacked Aridor for going to the U.S. to raise funds, instead of dealing with the crises here which he said the minister's policies have brought about.

Amori said further that the expected sales of Israeli Bonds were negligible, and thus there is no reason for Aridor's presence in the U.S.

Amori also said there is no truth in the Treasury's assertion that the world economic slump has hurt the Israeli economy, but just the opposite: Israel has earned about $500 million during the slump, due to the fall in prices of oil and other raw materials.

According to Amori, the finance minister has promised for months to appear before the committee, but instead has only sent his representatives. He then proposed that the committee refuse to consider any new item on its agenda until after it debates the Treasury's handling of the economy.

Liberal MK Dan Tichon also demanded an immediate debate on the problems of the export industry. Following these proposals, the committee denied its approval to the price rises requested by the Treasury.

World Socialists pass M-E resolutions

By LEA LEVAVI
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Socialist International's resolutions on the Middle East are "a document we can live with," MK Dov Zakai, head of Mapam's delegation, said here yesterday.

Zakai, victorious over the International's unanimous acceptance of Mapam as a full member with rights equal to those of the Labour Party, said the Socialist International is still the most important international platform for Israel.

"It is no longer an exclusive West European club," he said. "The landscape is changing, with members from Africa and Latin America. Walid Jumblatt of Lebanon also had to be taken into account. He wasn't happy with the document on the Middle East, but he threatened that if any additional changes were made in it, he would have to vote against."

That was definitely a factor," he said some of the Israeli reservations were accepted, such as changing a statement that the Israeli government had failed to implement the Kahan Commission recommendations to a statement that they were not fully implemented.

However, on other issues, Israeli efforts to change the document were unsuccessful. For example, the International insisted on using the word "invasion" in connection with the campaign in Lebanon.

Meanwhile, the body of slain PLO European coordinator Issam Sartawi was flown from Portugal en route to Amman two days after he was assassinated at the International's meeting.

A Lisbon judge was expected yesterday to rule on possible charges against a suspect in the killing detained by Lisbon police.

Civil-rights group hits ban on film

Jerusalem Post Staff

The Association for Civil Rights in Israel yesterday called upon the Film and Theatre Censorship Board to revoke a decision banning an episode in a new film called '83.

The Board is to review the decision, made on its behalf by a panel of its members at a plenary session next week.

The Board banned the section of the film called "The Night a King Was Born" on Monday on the grounds that "it does serious damage to the Israel Defence Forces and incites and agitates the Arab population."

The 25-minute episode, directed by Yehuda (Judd) Ne'eman, is one of five sections that make up '83, an 80-minute film depicting changes in Israeli Jewish society resulting from the occupation of Judea and Samaria. The Night concerns two IDF officers, privately engaged in buying land in the West Bank, who use physical and psychological pressure to induce a farmer to sell them his land.

The Association said the ban is an attack on the freedom of expression.

The other four shorts are The Torment of Dr. Vider, directed by Yigal Borstein, Survival, directed by Ram Levy, Souvenirs from Hebron and Souvenirs from Tel Aviv, both directed by Shimon Dotan.

Knesset Members Yossi Sarid (Alignment), Mordechai Virshupski (Shinui) and Shulamit Aloni (Ratz) yesterday criticized the decision to ban Ne'eman's film. Virshupski sent a telegram to the chairwoman of the sub-committee studying changes in the censorship law, Shoshana Arbelli-Almosino, demanding an immediate meeting of the sub-committee. Virshupski told The Jerusalem Post that the Board has no authority to ban the movie since it does not endanger state security.

Sarid on Monday urged Attorney-General Yitzhak Zamir to examine the Board's reasons for banning the film. He maintained that these reasons were purely political.

French Jew won't assume al Sartawi's work

PARIS (AP). — Ilan Halevy, the Franco-Israeli journalist designated by PLO leader Yasser Arafat to replace the assassinated Issam Sartawi at the Socialist meeting in Albufeira, is not willing to take over all of Sartawi's functions, he told a television interviewer in Paris yesterday.

He said he was willing to remain the representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization to the Socialist International, but had no indication yet if the role was to be made permanent.

"I am not at all ready to continue Dr. Sartawi's work in the dialogue with Israeli political forces and I do not think the Palestinian leaders want to ask me to do so," Halevy said.

"It is very obvious that being Israeli myself, I would be badly placed to serve as a Palestinian intermediary with political forces in Israel."

Halevy, 40, who has dual French and Israeli citizenship, moved to France eight years ago and joined the PLO six years ago.

6 Pentecostals plan to come to Israel

MOSCOW (Reuters). — Six members of two Pentecostal families living in the U.S. Embassy in Moscow left yesterday for Siberia.

A member of the group said they were returning to Chernogorsk, their Siberian home town, where they would apply for exit permits to emigrate to Israel.

They plan to join Lydia Vashchenko, who staged a hunger strike last year to press her demands for an exit permit and was given permission to leave the Soviet Union last week. She flew to Vienna, then to Israel on Sunday.

The members told Western journalists they had had a telephone call from Vashchenko yesterday and that she had encouraged them to return to Chernogorsk.

Haim Shapiro add:

Vashchenko was reported by Danny Smith, her spokesman, as pleased to be in Israel, but has no definite plans about her future. She is in Israel on a three-month tourist visa.

Yesterday, Vashchenko wrote to Prime Minister Menachem Begin to thank him and to ask for his help.

Haddad wants to talk to U.S., Lebanon

By MENAHEM HOROWITZ
Jerusalem Post Reporter

METULLA. — South Lebanon militia commander Maj. Sa'ad Haddad yesterday called on Lebanon and the U.S. to negotiate with him directly on an arrangement for Southern Lebanon.

"I invite Lebanese representatives to meet with me," he told reporters. "Why does President Amin Jemayel talk with representatives of the Christians and Druse in the Shouf Mountains to establish peace between them, but boycotts me?"

Haddad also had strong words for the Americans: "I was the one, who for six years prevented the entry of the Communists and terrorists to Southern Lebanon. Why does the U.S. administration refuse to talk with me?"

Haddad is favourably impressed with Israeli efforts on his behalf, according to reports of a discussion he held yesterday in Marjayoun with Minister without Portfolio Ariel Sharon.

Haddad rejected the suggestion that he serve in the future as a liaison between Israel and Lebanon. "This is a meaningless job," he said.

Haddad said he would begin recruiting more troops within the next few days.

Never again, Reagan tells survivors

Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — President Ronald Reagan has promised thousands of Holocaust survivors and their children that "the security of your safe havens, here and in Israel, will never be compromised."

Addressing the first American gathering of Jewish Holocaust survivors Monday night at the Capital Centre auditorium, the president declared that the world should never again ignore evil as it ignored Hitler's Germany. "We will never shut our eyes, never refuse to acknowledge the truth, no matter how unpleasant."

Reagan also appealed to the Soviet Union to account for the whereabouts of Swedish diplomat Raoul Wallenberg, who was responsible for saving thousands of Jews in Hungary. He is believed to be alive somewhere in a Soviet prison camp.

"I would affirm as president of the United States and if you would permit me, in the names of the survivors, that if those who took him from Budapest would win our trust, let them start by giving us an accounting of Raoul Wallenberg," Reagan said.

He and his wife Nancy appeared especially moved when they witnessed the reunion — after 38 years — of Rabbi Hershel Schechter of Washington, D.C., and Rabbi Yisrael Lau, the chief rabbi of Netanya. Schechter was an American army chaplain during the liberation of Buchenwald. It was then that he encountered the eight-year-old Yisrael Lau.

Kibbutz votes to return war ribbon

KASHKELON. — Kibbutz Sde Mitzpeh decided earlier this week to instruct its members who received the ribbon for fighting in the Lebanon war to return it.

The kibbutz is affiliated to Kibbutz Ha'artzi of Hashomer Hatzair. A general meeting of the kibbutz decided that the war was unnecessary. The settlement is made up almost entirely of young people who served in the war.

Members of a group called Lo La Ot (No to the Lebanon Ribbon) said yesterday that Samaj (Sergeant) Carlos Weiner, a soldier in the Israeli army, had been executed for six days and reduced in rank by a military disciplinary court for refusing to accept the ribbon. They have asked the judge advocate general to examine the reasons for Weiner's detention.

Congressmen up Israel aid

By WOLF BLITZER
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — In a political signal to the Reagan administration, a congressional subcommittee yesterday increased economic and military assistance to Israel in the pending foreign aid bill.

The House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East, chaired by Democrat Lee Hamilton of Indiana, raised the grant portion of the aid to Israel in the 1984 fiscal year by $365 million over the original Reagan administration recommendation.

The increase now goes before the full committee. Separate Senate approval is also required in the lengthy legislative process involved in passing foreign aid authorization and appropriation bills.

The Reagan administration had proposed that Israel receive $785m. in economic grants. The House subcommittee increased that sum to $850m.

On the military side, the administration had recommended that Israel receive a total of $1.7b. of which $550m. would be in grants, the remaining $1.15b. in loans. The House panel retained the same overall level but raised the grant portion to $850m., or exactly half of the total military package.

Democratic Representative Tom Lantos of California, one of Israel's best friends in Congress, was active in pushing for the aid increases. He was clearly pleased by the actions.

Despite strong administration objections, the Congress last year also raised overall economic and military aid levels to Israel. Based on yesterday's initial action, another substantial increase may be in the works this year as well. Administration officials once again expressed their opposition, insisting that Reagan's recommended levels were sufficient in meeting Israel's needs.

Conference stresses social gaps

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Deputy Minister of Labour and Social Affairs Ben-Zion Rubinfeld has called on the country's social workers to put more stress on integrating people in their care into the mainstream of society, now that the welfare system provides solutions to most material needs.

Rubinfeld spoke last night at the annual social workers' convention at Binyanei Ha'uma in Jerusalem. The conference, which about 2,000 social workers are attending, continues today with the presentation of 50 projects and studies.

Rubinfeld said that social work has succeeded in finding ways to meet the material needs of their clients, but many still feel that they live on the margins of society, and this problem requires a new approach, he said.

The theme of the conference is ways to deal with the various gaps in Israeli society, such as between the sexes, the haves and have-nots, and the old and the young.

First conference on biofeedback

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The first national conference on biofeedback, which will also launch the Israel Biofeedback Association, is to be held at Kibbutz Shefayim on April 24-25.

Three American experts in biofeedback will present papers at the conference. Dr. Alexander Segal, chairman of the organizing committee, told reporters yesterday.

Segal, who is a psychiatrist at Ichilov Hospital, said that although biofeedback is relatively new in Israel, it has been used in the U.S. for more than 10 years to relieve conditions as diverse as high blood pressure, migraine headaches, learning difficulties, low-back pain, epilepsy and asthma.

"Biofeedback is a new concept of learning control of physiological functions which are automatic — such as temperature and blood pressure," he said.

Registration for the conference is open, and those interested should contact the organizing department of Kopel conventions, 03-653616.

Egged seeks more funds for 'political lines'

MA'ALE EPHRAIM. — The Egged bus cooperative is willing to halve fares on the Jerusalem-Tel Aviv line and on several others, if the government will allow them to raise the price or receive an equivalent subsidy on unprofitable and underpriced lines, Egged spokesman Gideon Talmor told reporters yesterday.

The company operates 15-lines from Jerusalem to Judea and Samaria, some of which continue on to cities and towns in Israel proper. He said that most of these lines are not profitable. "We call them political lines," as a demonstration of Jewish presence.

Egged, which is negotiating with the government on new subsidies and fares, is seeking subsidies on its unprofitable lines.

Lahat to run again

TEL AVIV. — Mayor Shlomo Lahat will run for re-election as the Likud candidate in the municipal elections scheduled for October.

Lahat was nominated at a meeting of the Liberal Party late last night.

Lahat will be running for his third term as mayor. The Labour Alignment candidate is Dov Ben-Meir.

Kollek warns north Jerusalem Arabs against violence

By ROBERT ROSENBERG
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kolek has warned the teachers and civic and religious leaders of Shufat and Beit Hanina, northern suburbs of Jerusalem, that if they don't put an end to stone-throwing along the road to Neveh Ya'akov, "the police and army will."

At a meeting in Neveh Ya'akov yesterday that included police officers and Jewish and Arab residents of the area, Kolek's adviser on Arab affairs Maurice Zilka said the mayor "does not believe the religious Jews when they say that children throw stones, and he doesn't believe the Arab adults when they say that it's only children who throw stones."

Residents of Neveh Ya'akov offered the Shufat and Beit Hanina residents a plan to conduct joint Jewish-Arab patrols of the highway areas where the stone-throwing has taken place. The Arab leadership said that they would consider it. The Neveh Ya'akov residents, however, warned that if "Jewish-driven cars cannot pass through the neighbourhood safely, then Arabs' cars won't be able to, either."

Meanwhile, Kolek has written a major declaration from the two new chief rabbis, with wall posters of the declaration going up today throughout the capital. The declaration calls for "all the public... to beware of the foreign flame of violence that is spreading through the people of Israel... and which is forbidden under all circumstances. It causes divisions among brothers, which is a dangerous thing for the state."

It is unprecedented for the chief rabbis to comment on Shabbat violence by religious Jews, and it took several hours of negotiations to word the proclamation.

But the reference to the state is bound to mitigate the strength of the declaration in the neighbourhoods where the anti-Zionist Eda Haredit is most powerful.

A leading rabbi of the Eda, Yosef Sheinberger, yesterday was reported to have said that the Eda would "deal with the stone-throwers in our own fashion," and that under no circumstances would the ultra-orthodox community hand them over to the police.

He promised, however, that once the person responsible for the injuries caused to Hebrew University lecturer Uzi Rite, is caught, full punishment would be meted out. The extent of that punishment, said Sheinberger, who is secretary of the Eda, "depends on whether the person responsible is before or after Bar Mitzva."

'Thousands' of operations delayed by doctors' strike

Jerusalem Post Staff

TEL AVIV. — Since the doctors' strike began six weeks ago, about 3,500 operations have been postponed, according to Dr. Haim Doron, head of the Histadrut sick fund that employs 5,000 of the 8,500 striking doctors.

"Some of these operations were minor indeed, but others were serious, such as hysterectomies, heart surgery, kidney operations, and so on," Doron told a press conference yesterday. "If they are not operated on soon, the damage may be permanent."

He called for negotiations to continue "night and day" until the strike is settled, and offered his own services as a round-the-clock negotiator.

He recommended that negotiations be held "behind closed doors, out of the spotlight of the media, so that public charges and counter-charges would not fan minor misunderstandings into major ones."

One solution to the problem, he thought, might be for the doctors to declare a 45-day moratorium on their strike. This would give both the Finance Ministry and the doctors an opportunity to get down to the serious business of quiet negotiations.

Doron said there were thousands of cases where treatment could be delayed for short periods, "but not for many long weeks." He mentioned cases of persons with diabetes who might go blind if not treated soon, and of a person discharged from a psychiatric ward who went into a relapse and was not being treated.

He produced figures to show that the occupancy of Histadrut sick-fund hospitals had dropped from 105 per cent in January to 83 per cent today, and in some wards, such as ophthalmology and urology, the occupancy rate had dropped from 110 per cent in both to 40 per cent and 62 per cent respectively.

He rejected the contention that too many patients had in the past visited their family doctor without need, saying that between 50 to 65.5 per cent of the patients had been invited by their doctors to a second visit, "and nobody can say that these doctors told these patients to come back again just to increase their work load."

Doron admitted frankly that the continuation of the present strike might lead to the end of "public medicine," which had been one of the most important factors in the development of the country's stable population in outlying areas.

He bitterly attacked the method of operation of the "alternative medical stations" set up by the striking doctors.

He also noted that the Histadrut Sick fund had reached agreement with non-striking private doctors (i.e., doctors whose entire practice was private, and who were not wage-earners) to reimburse sick-fund patients according to a certain schedule for examinations and treatments. He did not know how many sick-fund patients had visited such private doctors, and how many had filed reimbursement claims.

Supreme Court hears Muadi brothers' appeals

By ROBERT ROSENBERG
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Supreme Court yesterday began to hear appeals by the three sons of former MK Jaber Muadi who were convicted 16 months ago of the murder of MK Hamad Abu Rabiya.

The main thrust of the appeals, which are being made separately for each of the three men — Seif, 25; Dahesh, 37; and Ha'el, 23 — is that the confessions which the Jerusalem District Court accepted were obtained illegally.

Lawyer Uzi Atzmon, speaking yesterday for Seif, whose confession was obtained during police interrogation in January and February of 1981, described those methods as a combination of "temptation and coercion."

According to Atzmon, who appeared for four hours yesterday before the bench consisting of Supreme Court President Yitzhak Kahan, Justice Menahem Elon, and Justice Yehuda Goldberg, Nitzav Mishne Armand Levy, who headed the investigation into the Beduin MK's murder, "lied repeatedly to Seif" during the interrogation.

Atzmon said at the hearing yesterday that Seif Muadi, for example, was promised that if he confessed, his two brothers would be set free.

According to Atzmon, the case is important because it reveals methods of police interrogation and "how the police often prefer efficiency to civil liberties."

The appeal is expected to take at least five days.

MK Abu Rabiya was shot dead in January 1981 outside the Holyland Hotel sitting in his car in the parking lot. The Muadi brothers' father and Abu Rabiya had quarrelled over a rotation agreement for their Labour seat in the Knesset.

Refusednik Vladimir Slepak marks 13th year of rebuff

By JUDY SIEGEL
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Vladimir Slepak, known among Soviet Jews as the "father of aliyah," yesterday marked the 13th anniversary of the submission of his application to leave to the Russian authorities. But there is as yet no sign that the authorities will approve his exit-permit application.

The 55-year-old radio engineer has been refused emigration longer than any other Soviet Jew. He left his post as head of a laboratory in the Scientific Institute of Television Research in early 1969, hoping that this step would facilitate his application for emigration. But it was turned down on the ground of "classified work," and subsequent applications were rejected on grounds of "state interest." However, Slepak, according to the Israel Public Council for Soviet Jewry, has not been exposed to classified information since 1969, and has not been employed regularly since 1971.

Thousands of Russian Jews have passed through the Slepak apartment in Moscow over the years, and it has been raided and searched repeatedly. Slepak's name is repeatedly vilified in the Soviet press and on TV. He also served short terms in prison until his arrest in 1978 for "malicious hooliganism," when he hung a banner from his balcony calling for the right to go to Israel.

Independence TV show changed for lack of a family

By JUDY SIEGEL
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Broadcasting Authority has not found a single family willing to star in its Independence Day film about a family who lived through the events and struggles of the 35-year-old country.

Since the authority announced the competition last October, about 100 families applied or were recommended by others. But none of the finalists was willing to appear in the film as "The Independence Family."

So TV has decided to select individuals from six families and to depict their lives and personal histories on the screen. The programme will be broadcast on Sunday, Independence Day Eve, at 9.30 p.m. The 50-minute film was produced by Hanina Amotz and directed by Haim Gil, both of whom declined to reveal which families and individuals were selected.

Authority director-general Yosef Lapid announced six months ago that TV was looking for families whose members represent various ethnic communities, have some connection with the country's security and defence, science and other fields of achievement, and include recent immigrants and native born, religious and secular Jews. The family was not to be well known to the public.

The authority spokesman admitted that the film to be broadcast "was not what we had originally intended, but it will be a success in itself."

In Tel Aviv, Rehov Dizengoff will turn into a pedestrian mall from Dizengoff Circle to Sderot Ben-Gurion on Independence Day Eve, and from 4 p.m. on Independence Day for performances and entertainment events.

Seven stages, each serving an ethnic group, will offer folklore performances on the closed-off section of Rehov Dizengoff on Sunday evening.

Independence Day celebrations will begin Sunday evening with a ceremony at the "Independence Hall" (Heichal Ha'atzmaut) on Sderot Rothschild, where the Independence of Israel was declared. Deputy Mayor Yitzhak Arzi said at a press conference yesterday. The ceremony will be attended by some of those who signed the Declaration of Independence and were members of the First Knesset.

Ministry revamps star system for restaurants

By HAIM SHAPIRO
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Tourism Ministry yesterday decided to change its system of recommending restaurants by putting them into groups indicated by one to four stars.

All recommended restaurants will have to serve a fixed-price meal for tourists. Among the criteria determining the number of stars are the restaurant's size, its decor and table settings.

The quality of food served will also be a criterion. The Ministry's spokesman said in reply to a question. He said Ministry teams will eat at the restaurants to determine their standard of food. Further checks will be made to ensure that the standard is maintained, he said.

Separate criteria have also been determined for recommended self-service restaurants and cafes. The new system will use a new symbol and the Ministry's old recommendation signs are to be recalled.

Presidential aides

President-elect Chaim Herzog has asked two of President Yitzhak Navon's top aides to stay on "at least for a while" after he assumes office.

Spokesman and military aide de camp Ami Gluska, and personal secretary and assistant Hassia Weiner, agreed to stay on at the presidential residence.

Crackdown on unlicensed restaurants

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Jerusalem police are planning a crackdown on unlicensed restaurants and bars, particularly in the Rehov Rivlin area near Beit Agnon. The Jerusalem Post has learned.

There is a long-term plan at City Hall to make the Rehov Rivlin-Rehov Yoel Solomon area in Nahlat Shiva in downtown Jerusalem a centre of the capital's nightlife.

Already many of the city's most popular bars are in the picturesque area, which was one of the first neighbourhoods built outside of the Old City walls.

Maof's Europe flights under normal limitations

Jerusalem Post Staff

The Maof charter airline, which will be permitted to fly to five European destinations starting this coming Saturday, subject to existing charter regulations, the Civil Aviation Authority announced yesterday. The decision came just after the Tel Aviv District Court rejected an appeal by Maof against the Transport Ministry's refusal to permit the company to fly to the five cities without restriction.

Maof had been barred from flying to Frankfurt, Cologne, Munich, Marseilles and Luton (near London), because EL Al has routes to these destinations. Regulations ban charter airlines from flying Israeli nationals and foreigners together on the same plane.

Sports

Spanish master

AUGUSTA, Georgia (Reuter). — Severiano Ballesteros streaked away from the field with two early birdies and an eagle yesterday to coast to an easy victory in the Masters golf Championship.

The 26-year-old Spaniard won the title for the second time with his eight-under-par total of 280, closing with a 69 in windy conditions which made scoring difficult.

Ben Crenshaw, whose 68 was the low round of the day, shared runner-up spot with Tom Kite on 284. Kite carded a 69.

Tom Watson and Ray Floyd finished one stroke farther back, with defending champion Craig Stadler and Hale Irwin bracketed on 286.

Crenshaw and Kite expressed awe at Ballesteros' performance. Kite said he felt like a Chevrolet trying to catch a Ferrari. Watson said of his Spanish opponent: "He is an aggressive, flamboyant type of player. He's an Arnold Palmer type."

Ballesteros said he felt flattered to be compared with Palmer, who still thrills the galleries with his all-or-nothing, attacking brand of golf. "It's very good for someone like Tom Watson to say that. It is good to be compared with such a great player as Arnold Palmer," Ballesteros said.

Happy homecoming

By JACK LEON
Post Sports Reporter

ASHKELON. — Shlomo Glickstein, Shahar Perkis, David Schneider and Amos Mansdorf, the leading Israeli contenders in the $25,000 ATP Dabek Cup tennis tournament at the Israel Tennis Centre here, all won their first round singles matches yesterday.

Top-seeded Glickstein, playing for the first time in a tournament at the ITC in the town of his birth, made short shrift before 1,000 enthusiastic spectators of "lucky loser" Russell Myers, winning 6-1, 6-1. Mark Freedman, of the U.S., who was scheduled to play the Israeli champion, never arrived.

Particularly meritorious was the 6-3, 6-3 victory of Amos Mansdorf, the 17-year-old Asian champion, over American Rodney Crawley. This gives Mansdorf three ATP points, the first of his career.

Perkis showed good form in vanquishing Bruno Corbiere of France, who is ranked 292 in the world, 200 above the gangling Haifa star.

Schneider had much more difficulty overcoming the resistance of South African Brian Levine, and came through in a cliffhanger 6-7, (5-7), 7-6, (7-4), 6-3.

Glickstein will be the first on court today at 2 p.m., in a second round encounter with Paul Groth (U.S.).

Under the direction of tournament referee and manager Aharon Sapir, the organization of the tournament has been as smooth as clockwork.

Nostalgic victories

LOS ANGELES (AP). — Stan Smith and Roscoe Tanner, both well-known veterans of the pro tennis circuit, scored first victories on Monday.

Smith, who won the event in 1972 and 1977, took a 6-4, 6-1 triumph over Victor Amaya as unseeded players opened the tournament at the Los Angeles tennis club.

Tanner, who has slipped to 111th on the world rankings list slugged seven service aces in the match as he downed Tom Collickson 7-5, 6-4. Best nostalgia stopped there.

Another unseeded player, who once was ranked among the very best players in the world, Harold Solomon, lost his first match to Tim Wilkison, 5-7, 6-2, 7-6.

Beersheba through

TEL AVIV. — Hapoel Beersheba beat Hapoel Tirat Hacarmel on penalties yesterday in their replayed State Cup match. The scores were level 1-1 at the end of extra time, but Beersheba went on to win 4-2 on penalties.

Royal Leonard

KANSAS CITY, Missouri (AP). — The Kansas City Royals probably proved last year that Dennis Leonard is crucial to any hopes they might have of winning the American League West Championship.

Last May the hard-throwing veteran broke two fingers stopping a line smash with his pitching hand. The Royals spent the rest of the season in a futile duel with California. Leonard missed matches and the Angels won the flag, finishing three games ahead of the Royals.

But after Monday night's strikeouts in a 6-2 victory over Boston, Leonard and manager Dick Howser were resting a lot easier. "Leonard threw the ball as well as he can tonight," Howser said. "He had no good a fastball as he is going to have. I have been very impressed with the way he's thrown four of his last five times. He was mixing his pitches very well."

In Monday night's only other AL game, the Kansas City Royals defeated the Seattle Mariners, 6-1.

Tim Lincecum drove in four runs for California with a pair of singles, and left-hander Tommy John scattered seven hits for his second complete game in two starts. Bobby Grich went 4-for-4 for the Angels.

Police to use roadside drunk-driver tests

Jerusalem Post Reporter

It will be at least two to three months before the police have the equipment necessary to conduct on-the-spot examinations of suspected drunken drivers, as they were empowered to do by a law that went into effect this week.

According to Nitzav-Mishne Eitan Ben-Yehoshua, head of the national police traffic division, most of the "breathalyzer" equipment has been ordered, "but none of it is yet in hand."

Ben-Yehoshua told The Jerusalem Post yesterday that while he is not convinced there has been a major increase in the amount of alcohol consumed, there is "a feeling in the public that people are drinking more."

Volunteer raped

Jerusalem Post Reporter

AFAD. — Police have arrested a 4-year-old local resident suspected of the rape yesterday of a West German volunteer from Kibbutz Lot Mordechai.

The 20-year-old woman was invited by the alleged rapist to move to his apartment in Safid's Old City. When she refused, he allegedly attacked her. She reportedly had been raped in West Germany shortly before coming to Israel.

Meanwhile, a 20-year-old Kfar Avia man was arrested earlier this week on suspicion of raping a 19-year-old hitch-hiker whom he picked up at the Ra'anana junction.

'Gandhi' collects eight Oscars, E.T. gets four

LOS ANGELES (Reuter). — The Anglo-Indian film Gandhi on Monday night won eight Oscars, including Best Picture and the Best Actor Award for Ben Kingsley in his first screen role.

Sir Richard Attenborough, named Best Director after struggling for 20 years to finance and make the $22 million film of the life of the Indian leader, told a star-studded audience:

"The person you truly honour is Mahatma Gandhi and his plea to live in peace. He was an inspiration to millions and millions of people...I believe he had something to say to all of us everywhere in the world."

It was a special triumph for Britain, which won the Oscar last year for best picture with Chariots of Fire.

Meryl Streep, as expected, won the award for Best Actress for her role as a Nazi concentration-camp survivor haunted by the past in Sophie's Choice.

Lou Gossett became the first black actor in 20 years to win an Oscar when he was named Best Supporting Actor for his role as a tough drill sergeant in An Officer and A Gentleman.

Jessica Lange, nominated for Oscars for Best Actress and Best Supporting Actress, had to make do with the lesser of the awards, for her role as an actress in Tootsie.

Mickey Rooney, the "Andy Hardy" of yesteryear, won a standing ovation and brought members of the audience close to tears when he reminded them — in accepting an honorary Oscar — of the days when nobody would give him a job.

But it was the film Gandhi which dominated the night and picked up the top awards that studio officials estimate could add at least $20 million to its box office takings.

Its closest rival for Oscar honours, E.T. — The Extra-Terrestrial, the $600m. box office blockbuster about a wizened, friendly little creature from outer space, won four awards.

Kingsley, of half-Indian parentage although born in England, told his audience in collecting his award for his portrayal of Gandhi: "This is an Oscar for vision, for courage, for acting and for peace."

Somalia on alert for Ethiopian raid

MOGADISHU (Reuter). — Somali Defence Minister Mohamed Ali Samantar has put the armed forces on full alert because he believes Ethiopia may be preparing fresh military action.

In an address to mark the 23rd anniversary of the Somali armed forces, Samantar said: "The Ethiopians, backed by Cubans, Libyans and Warsaw Pact forces, nurse the idea of going forward. The signs for a prelude to an attack on Somalia are there."

The Somali minister said he had taken the decision after receiving information that Ethiopia was planning an offensive in the border area which was the scene of bitter fighting between the two countries last summer.

Ethiopia has denied any direct involvement in last summer's fighting and insists that the clashes were between Somali troops and Ethiopian-backed anti-government Somali guerrillas.

Troops quell Moslem violence in Pakistan

KARACHI (Reuter). — Troops were sent in to control a fresh outbreak of religious violence in Karachi yesterday as thousands of Moslem demonstrators burned shops, houses and cars.

"They said the troops arrived in the Liaquatabad area after police were unable to control Sunni Moslem crowds."

According to the eyewitnesses, 18 shops, five houses and two cars were burned and two places of worship set ablaze in a confrontation between Sunni and Shia Moslems in the West Karachi area.

Ban upheld on Coptic pope

CAIRO (Reuter). — An Egyptian court yesterday upheld a presidential ban on Coptic Pope Shenouda in a decision that seemed likely to cause disquiet among Egypt's Christian minority.

The court refused to lift a 1981 order by the late president Anwar Sadat banishing the 60-year-old pope to a desert monastery and stripping him of his temporal powers. He was accused of fomenting sectarian strife against Egypt's Moslem majority.

The brief decision, read quickly by Judge Galal Abdelhamid, said: "The (presidential) decree in dispute is invalid as far as what it contains on the setting up of a papal committee to look after the patriarchate's responsibilities. Apart from that, other demands (by the defence) are rejected."

Many spectators and lawyers got the initial impression that the court had reinstated the pontiff. Copts in the public gallery immediately broke into wild cheering.

But government lawyer Gamal Laban told reporters: "The court has simply upheld the decision to depose the pope and dissolved the five-man papal committee."

The committee had run Egypt's Coptic church ever since Pope Shenouda was confined to his desert monastery. Yesterday's ruling effectively instructed the church to elect a new pope.

Ex-president*Galtieri detained

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter). — Former Argentine president Leopoldo Galtieri has been ordered to spend 60 days in military detention because of statements attributed to him about last year's war with Britain over the Falkland Islands, domestic news agencies said on Monday.

Military sources were not immediately available to comment on the reports, which also said Galtieri would face trial by a military court.

Quoting reliable sources, the news agency DYN said army commander Cristino Nicolaides took the decision to punish Galtieri before leaving on a two-day tour to inspect military garrisons.

Another independent news agency quoted military sources as saying that Galtieri's statements broke army rules.

Galtieri was quoted as criticizing the roles of other senior military officers in the Falklands conflict and the events leading to his overthrow shortly after Britain recaptured the islands.

Students in Cairo boycott classes

CAIRO (AP). — Students at the American University of Cairo boycotted classes yesterday for the second consecutive day to protest a 20 per cent hike in tuition fees.

Nearly 500 students gathered in a courtyard on campus while members of the student union discussed the increase and other student demands with university officials.

Walesa meets Solidarity activists

WARSAW (Reuter). — Lech Walesa, leader of Poland's banned Solidarity trade union, held a secret meeting at the weekend with leaders of the underground opposition movement, he announced in a communique yesterday.

The communique, read over the telephone by Walesa's wife Danuta at her Gdansk home, said the meeting took place between Saturday and Monday. It did not say where.

It was the first reported meeting between Walesa and his former union colleagues who have coordinated the underground campaign against martial law since the Solidarity leader's release from internment last October.

Walesa has said in the past he supports the aims, if not necessarily the methods, of the underground movement, which organized demonstrations and strikes in protest against the suppression of Solidarity.

The communique said: "The head of the presidium of Solidarity's national commission, Lech Walesa, met the Solidarity provisional coordinating commission on April 9, 10 and 11, 1983."

"They discussed in detail the country's situation and coordinated their stands," it said.

ELECTIONS. — Britain was betting yesterday on Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher calling a general election in June, 11 months before her five-year mandate runs out. Thatcher's aides acknowledged that political pressure was building up for an election in June but insisted nothing had yet been decided.

Film actress Dolores del Rio dies at 78

NEWPORT BEACH, California (AP). — Dolores del Rio, a Mexican-born actress who was one of Hollywood's favourite leading ladies in the 1920s and 1930s, died Monday at her home here, the authorities said. She was 78.

Del Rio was born Lolita Dolores Martinez Asunsolo Lopez Negrette. In 1920, she married Jamie del Rio, an attorney 18 years older than her.

By the time she attained star status in her 1928 appearance in Ramona, her marriage had broken up. After a 10-year marriage to Cedric Gibbons, she became involved in an affair with Orson Welles, and made Journey into Fear in 1942 with him as co-star and director.

The new Alfred M. and Frances Frisch Child Haven, Beth Hayeled Gilo, Jerusalem, which is being dedicated today, will house the children presently living in the Tel Ra'anon Children's Home and the Meshek Yeladim Motza Children's Home.

The 79,000 members of American Mizrahi Women, both in the USA and in Israel have always had a special place in their hearts for the children's homes which they support, affording young children, whose families are unable to function normally, to receive education and loving care, combined with everyday necessities.

American Mizrahi Women has never been an Organization to turn its back on a challenge, and the providing of a modern, warm home for hundreds of disadvantaged children was indeed a considerable challenge, and the dream of a new child haven, once conceived, was fervently pursued. The ground-breaking which took place on September 28, 1980 was the first step towards the realization of that dream, and since then, the construction of the modern edifice has been going ahead steadily. How does one manage to maintain the personal touch with so many children? With that aim in mind, a plan was conceived to simulate the family structure within Beth Hayeled. The children will be housed in "families" with a married couple, the counsellors, at the head of each unit. The group will number 10 to 12 boys and girls of different ages, creating a normal family structure. They will eat, sleep, and do homework in their own wing, providing a shared family life.

Today, April 13, 1983, in the presence of the major donors and the distinguished officers of American Mizrahi Women, the Beth Hayeled is being dedicated. Three year old Avi, eight year old Sarit and ten year old Yaffa, with all the other children, will make the new Beth Hayeled their home.

Exports of Discount Investment firms rose 15% last year Total net profit was IS501m.

By MACABEE DEAN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The total exports of companies and affiliates of Discount Investment (DIC) — the forerunner in investing in high-technology industry such as Elron, Elscint, Selex and Elbit — rose from $175 million in 1981 to $202m. an increase of 15 per cent. "This is well above the national average and a considerable achievement in a period when the West is in the throes of a recession," said Dan Tolowsky, director-general of the corporation. He added that during the past five years "exports achieved an average annual increase at an annual compound rate of 32 per cent in current dollar terms."

The net current consolidated profit of DIC for 1982 came to IS490m, compared to IS162m. in 1981, a three-fold increase.

Earnings per ISI nominal value share were IS2.27, as against IS0.88 for the previous year.

Average weighted share capital increased from IS172m. in 1981 to IS206m. in 1982. Total net profit, including capital profit, came to IS501m., compared with IS222m. in the previous year. Total capital and reserves stood at IS1,374m. on December 31, 1982, compared with IS471m. at the end of the previous year. Total assets grew from IS9,484m. to IS22,704m.

The investment portfolio reached IS1,257m. at the end of 1982 compared with IS470m. in the previous year.

Turning to another yardstick of performance, Tolowsky said that "we have attempted to evaluate the theoretical yield in current dollars on an investment in our stock. A shareholder who had converted American dollars to acquire our stock on January 1, 1976, and who exercised all his entitlements to rights issues and share option warrants, and reinvested all dividends in additional stock, and who finally sold out on January 27, 1983 — after the Tel Aviv stock market slump — at prevailing (after slump) prices, would have had an average, compound annual return of 21.7 per cent in current dollars."

He noted that "even taking the devaluation of the dollar into account, the return would put such an investor into an impressive earnings bracket for an investment corporation stock, here or in the U.S."

Commenting on adjusting profits in accordance with Recommendation 23 of the Israel Chamber of Certified Public Accountants, he noted that it gave entirely different results from those resulting from computing profit according to the law for taxation of inflationary profits.

For example, Recommendation 23 only gave DIC profits of IS5.7m. for 1982. This was due mostly to the fact that as applied to industrial enterprises or holdings it introduced severe distortions. "This method of computation is open to various interpretations. And as we are very involved in industry, the results of basing 'our figures on Recommendation 23 leads to strange results," Tolowsky said.

As for the law for taxes on inflationary profits, he thought it produced more accurate results, but still had some severe flaws. For example, it looked upon investment companies, such as DIC, as though they were dealers in securities. "We invest in equity for the long haul, not for the short haul as stockbrokers do."

A typical flaw was, for example, that while Elron owned 69 per cent of the equity of Elbit, and the Discount Group owned 30 per cent of Elron, and DIC directly owned 3.3 per cent of Elbit, the law taxed the 3.3 per cent of Elbit held directly on the ground that the holding was less than the legal hurdle of 5 per cent, totally disregarding the indirect holding in Elron. This has led DIC to sell its 3.3 per cent holding.

Or to take another example, if DIC holds 5 per cent of Elscint, and bought, as it has done, more stock in Elscint, the additional acquisition was taxed as though DIC was a broker, notwithstanding the fact that DIC had no intention of reselling it at a capital profit. "These flaws should be eliminated from the law," Tolowsky said.

Commenting on different ways to value DIC's shares, he noted that their value based on net assets as presented in the balance sheet, was around IS12 per ISI nominal value. On the Tel Aviv stock exchange their traded price was equivalent to IS24, and if the increments arising out of the actual market value of publicly traded securities owned by DIC was taken into account, the net asset value would rise to IS48. Even this figure ignores the value of unlisted stocks held by DIC.

The annual report shows DIC's changing investment policy, as well as the fact that the percentage of income from different types of investments has changed over the past five years.

DIC's investments in industry have increased from 46.7 per cent of its investment portfolio in 1978 to 54.7 per cent in 1982. At the same time the percentage of its current income derived from industry rose from 20.9 per cent in 1978 to 51.9 per cent last year.

Other changes	1978	1982

Dead Sea bromine success story

THE DEAD SEA contains many different salts, among them magnesium bromide. A start was made in 1955 at extracting the bromine. Today Israel is the world's biggest exporter of this product.

Its chief use overseas 25 years ago was to make EDB (ethylene dibromide), an additive to petrol which removes the lead from engine cylinders, expelling it into the atmosphere.

Biggest customers were the oil companies, and they did not care to buy from Israel, owing to the Arab boycott.

Fortunately this disadvantage proved short-lived. The Americans opted one day for lead-free gasoline, to reduce pollution. Cleaning the fuel involves a longer and more expensive refining process. But it makes anti-knock compounds like EDB superfluous.

Two-thirds of the world's bromine had gone to make EDB. That proportion suddenly dropped to one-third; but the setback did not last long. Laboratories worked overtime to find new tasks for this versatile element.

Israel marketed little EDB, so was not much affected; her need was up. In 1971 she ranked as fifth-largest producer, making 12,000 tons a year. Ahead were the U.S. (biggest supplier by far), Britain, France and the Soviet Union. World production rose during the rest of that decade (the 1970s) by 80,000 tons, or over 30 per cent.

Nearly all the increase was accounted for by two countries: Israel (plus 38,000 tons) and the U.S. (plus 32,000 tons). Israel is now the world's second-largest producer and, as stated above, its top exporter — given that 96 per cent of her output is sold abroad, in natural or processed form.

DEPOSITS IN THE Dead Sea are virtually unlimited, yet exploiting them proved unprofitable at the beginning. There were difficulties, first in the area of logistics. Bromine is smelly (the Greek word "bromos" means stink), toxic (methylbromide was used in World War I as a poison-gas) and corrosive. Handling it, shipping it and maintaining the installation was an expensive business.

The Dead Sea Bromine Company (DSBC), a subsidiary of the state-owned Dead Sea Works got its teeth into the problems. It developed a whole range of receptacles, extending from the traditional one-litre glass bottles to iso-containers — this being a lead-lined steel tank, sized like a container, with a capacity of close to 20 tons.

Output of the chemical was stepped up to 21,000 tons in 1976 and 55,000 tons last year. The early production-towers held 900 tons, today each tower contains 10,000 tons.

Expansion necessitated processing. Bromine is an oxidizing agent, it combines readily with other elements to form compounds with a wide range of end-uses. They also fetch a better price. The DSBC created in 1961 a subsidiary called Bromine Compounds Ltd. (BCL) at Ramat-Hovav, near Beersheba. The two factories now earn between them $80 million a year.

Fifteen per cent is bromine directly exported by DSBC, the rest compounds made in BCL out of bromine, trucked up from Sdom. Head of the unit is Ariel Ginsburg, manager of the Ramat-Hovav factory is Dr. Meir Englert.

The plant in Sdom takes the magnesium bromide, a brown liquid, and combines it with chlorine — likewise obtained from the Dead Sea — to separate the bromine. This leaves magnesium chloride, which goes back into the lake. (The Pericla Company uses it to make brick lining for high-temperature furnaces.)

THE DEAD SEA has the greatest concentration of bromine on record, at 10-12 grams per litre. This element is usually found in seawater, but the Americans have recently discovered rich inland deposits in the course of oil-drilling; which accounts for the increase in their output.

Located in Arkansas and Michigan, the concentration is only 5 grams; however the brine is hot, while Israel's brine has to be heated with costly electricity to extract the bromine.

What is this material used for? Many things. The Israeli group manufactures 30 different compounds. One of its specialties is a combination of methyl-bromide and EDB for soil fumigation, in which Israel's farmers have experience.

Another is flame retardants. Ginsburg sees this as a promising area. "Legislation all over the world requires increasingly the use of flame-resistant materials," for curtains, carpets, furniture.

"We have developed, for example, a substance which protects curtains without disarranging the folds or spoiling the shine of the material — and the fabric can be dry-cleaned to boot."

Another substance requiring protection is plastics, whose market is enormous. It is replacing conventional materials like timber and iron at a headlong pace: "Plastics have in the course of time to be made fireproof as well, we are working on that," says Ginsburg.

What else? Medicaments. Bromine once had a role as a sedative. Agitated persons in Queen Victoria's time were administered a bromo-seltzer. It is out of fashion nowadays because the compound was found (alarmingly) to have a mildly toxic cumulative effect.

BROMINE still supplies many pharmaceutical intermediates. Bromides are used in the cosmetic industry. A completely new function has lately arisen in another area altogether. When drilling for oil, especially off-shore, calcium bromide is necessary to hold the soil formation and prevent it from collapsing.

There seems no end to the tasks that this chemical, described contemptuously in the Oxford Concise Dictionary as "a poisonous dark liquid with rank smell," can perform.

World output is growing slowly at the rate of two per cent annually, and reached 360,000 tons last year. Prices are not good in a recession-prone market. They stood high in 1976, at $1,050 a ton for bromine, but dropped subsequently to $700. Still, the two Israeli firms are managing. They turned out a net profit before tax of $2.5m. in 1982, and expect to show $4m. this year.

THE U.S. SEES THEM as redoubtable competitors. The consultant firm Kidder Peabody, reporting to the biggest American company in the bromine industry, Great Lakes Chemicals, describes Israel's attempt in November 1981 to secure GSP rating (that is, the tariff reduction which is granted to developing states) for a flame-retardant chemical called by a very long name, conveniently shortened to TBBA.

The application was rejected. The consultants explain: "It can be argued that Israel is hardly underdeveloped and has indeed demonstrated international competitiveness in the TBBA market." The tariff remains at 20 per cent. The negative ruling on Israel's petition was, the consultants observe, "a favourable development for Great Lakes Chemicals. For the near term, further penetration by BCL has been thwarted."

But America's exports of TBBA to Japan are dutiable, and BCL, described by Kidder Peabody in a half-mocking headline as "The Troublemaker," has increased its share of the Japanese market for this product from 16 per cent in 1977 to one-third. The consultants conclude this section of their report: "We believe Bromine Compounds Ltd. will continue to be a formidable competitor in the international market for bromine compounds."

THE FIRM acting for BCL in this suit for a tariff benefit was an American affiliate called Ameribrom. The Israeli group has marketing subsidiaries also in London, The Hague, Johannesburg and Tokyo.

It owns a factory in Holland called Bromchemie. Ginsburg explains: "There are products in which bromine forms only a diminutive part. It is not always economic to manufacture such an item here. Foreign companies would in that case prefer to make it themselves, importing the bromine as a raw material."

"Our Dutch plant turns out compounds of that kind. When the Israeli-mined input is only a small component of the finished product, it can be cheaper for us to do the processing close to our foreign clients, who are big chemical firms. This provides us also with a footing in the European market — it gives us a European presence, so to speak."

The group as a whole employs 670 workers — 600 of them in Israel, of whom 45 devote themselves to research and development. They seek out new and better uses for bromine. All the company's profits are re-invested in growth. "We aim to double our exports in the next decade," Ginsburg predicts.

Price drops right across the board

TEL AVIV. — Most of the bulls stampeded out of the corral yesterday, leaving behind them sharply falling prices. Most, but not all, the commercial banks came off unscathed, for investors in such shares as the Danot-First International group also joined the rush, with prices in this group falling between 2.3% and 8.8%.

In all other categories, only a few stocks rose. While two shares were "buyers only," seven were "sellers only." But this does not tell the whole story, for while only ten rose by 5% or more, 93 fell by similar margins.

The daily index shows that stocks fell by 1.04%, but if commercial banks, which rose by a mere 0.03%, are excluded, the index of all stocks fell by 2.18%. The worst falls were among insurance companies, which lost 2.90%.

Turnover fell to IS$88 million, down considerably from the IS$1,069m. of Monday.

Among commercial banks, in addition to the Danot-First International group, mention should be made of Finance and Trade, which lost between 2.5% and 5.1% on its various shares. Mizrahi continued its new tradition of rising five points a day.

Among mortgage banks there was a general decline, with few exceptions, the main one being Tefahot, which although its option "B" lost 1.7%, showed a 7.6% rise in its capital notes.

Only one share, Mishmar-Harel 5, rose among insurance companies, and the rise was 2%. The company which fell hardest was Ararat 0.5, which lost 10%, while Phoenix 0.5 fell by 8%. The largest turnover, IS$14.4m., was chalked up by Has-sneh registered, which remained firm at 1,710 points, despite an offer of 736,400 shares (nominal value).

As for services and utilities, there were a few scattered rises, such as Galei Zohar 1.0, which gained 10.2%. Most shares in the group fell anywhere from 1% (in good cases) up to 14.4% for the Hilan options.

The picture was slightly brighter among land development shares. Levinstein 1.0 and 5.0 rose by 9.6% and 9.5%. Darad 0.1 gained 5.9%, but most other shares fell, with Lumit putting in the worst performance, losing 16%. But there were many others which fell between 5% and 10%.

Among industrials, even such

"solid" shares as Elbit and Elron fell, the first by 2.7% and the latter by 3%. Aryt, which for the past few days has climbed by 25 points a day, continued its performance yesterday. Aryt gained 2.9%.

Among investment companies Unico reg. and bearer rose by 2.9% and 4.8%. Elgar bearer gained 4.3%. There were a few other investment companies which gained a percentage point or two, but the general trend was sharply downwards. Jordan and Landeco fell between 7.5% and 10%.

Oil companies were mixed, with Delek Exploration gaining 5% and Teroil options gaining 5.4%, but MGVO options losing 10.5%.

Index-linked bonds were firm. Neot Aviv has filed a prospectus to issue 3,266,573 rights.

Discount Investments published its financial statements for 1982. (Story on page 6)

Foreign trade

deficit up by 27%

Post Economic Reporter

Israel's adverse foreign trade balance increased in the last three months by 27 per cent and the foreign trade deficit now stands at $770 million.

This happened despite lower fuel prices which led to a decline of $160m. in fuel imports. The main reason was the 10 per cent decline in exports, 13 per cent less in industrial exports.

Imports, apart from fuel, increased notably. Consumer goods imports were up by 22 per cent, of this, car imports increased by 32 per cent, investment goods imports (machinery etc.) increased by 31 per cent and diamonds were up 74 per cent. Production inputs (including raw materials) rose by only 2 per cent.

Consumers' champion heads food body

By MARTHA MEISELS

Post Consumer Affairs Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Dr. Jerry Westin, once an outspoken critic of government policy on food pollution control, has been named director of the Food Administration at the Health Ministry. He replaces Litman Mor, who retired after many years in the post.

Westin, a physician who specialized in aerospace medicine, and environmental medicine, immigrated from California after the Six Day War. He achieved local prominence as medical consultant of the American-style Consumer Shield organization. He led a successful fight against pesticide residues in milk.

For the past few years, Westin has worked at the Food Administration, which is responsible for enforcing food purity and food labelling laws.

Differing reasons given for Haifa station collapse

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — Israel Railways this week released the conclusions of its investigation into the collapse of a 90-ton section of platform roof at Haifa's new railway station in Bat Galim three weeks ago.

Nobody was injured in the collapse, which happened late at night after trains had stopped running.

The railways said a report by its civil engineering expert, Prof. Moshe Adin of the Technion revealed a design and construction fault in a supporting pillar. A series of X-ray tests are now being carried out on other pillars.

But Zecharia Drucker, whose construction firm built the complex eight years ago, told The Jerusalem Post that investigations by his engineering expert, Prof. Y. Eidelman, showed that incorrect maintenance had caused the collapse.

Drucker denied the allegations and said that drainage pipes had been allowed to become blocked and rain water of up to one metre in depth had collected on the roof.

"The roof was not designed to support such a weight and this is why it had collapsed," he said.

to Lebanon's readiness now to agree to Haddad remaining in the area in some capacity. Lebanon is still balking, though, at Israel's insistence that Haddad be commander of the zone.

Israeli officials were encouraged recently by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's public statement in support of "withdrawal of all foreign forces." Previously the Soviets had been demanding unconditional Israeli withdrawal.

But a possible snag could be the implication — already hinted at in Soviet media — that Moscow wants the U.S., French and Italian troops of the Multinational Force to leave Lebanon along with the other foreign forces. The Soviet media have referred to them in this connection as "NATO troops."

Israel's assessment is that without the MNF, and especially the American contingent which is the backbone of the force, the government in Beirut might quickly collapse.

Other aspects of the agreement, meanwhile are continuing to take shape. Yesterday at Netanyahu Israeli and Lebanese customs officials and post-office men discussed the arrangements to be made in their respective fields. Another working group focused on how to avoid the smuggling across the border — of hashish and other items.

The sense of uncertainty over Syrian intentions was voiced by Shamir again. He told Habib that there still did not seem to be a solid assessment that the Syrians and the PLO would indeed withdraw from Lebanon simultaneously with the IDF.

Nonchalance as policy

THE DOCTORS' strike, now in its seventh week, is dragging on with no real hope of resolution any time soon. Worse, no visible effort is being made to even start tackling the outstanding issues.

Meetings between representatives of the parties immediately concerned — the Israel Medical Association and the government — are held once every 10 days or so and last about 15 minutes each, if that. The latest such session was held on Sunday. When it broke up, Health Minister Eliezer Shostak exultantly — and absurdly — declared that the strike should be over by the end of the week. His reason was that now, at long last, it had been revealed that the central issue in the conflict was doctors' basic salaries.

Somewhat inexplicably, it escaped the health minister's notice that the proposals submitted by the doctors on Sunday were substantially the same as those for which they had been pressing throughout the strike. The stalemate had been the result not of insufficient information but of a clash of diametrically opposed salary programmes.

The IMA wants a doubling of doctors' basic salaries, whereas the Treasury would only allow salary rises up to the 22 per cent set in the collective wage agreement. Only mutual concessions would produce an accord. But for the moment the parties are doing only what they have done for the past six weeks, which is digging in.

The Treasury, claiming that the slightest crack in the 22 per cent dam would let loose a flood of disastrous wage demands, is simply taking the strike in its stride. Finance Minister Yoram Aridor, apparently ready for the long haul, has just taken off for America, his second extended foreign trip since the start of the walkout. Mr. Aridor must believe that time is on his side. For one thing, the doctors appear to be making less from their "alternative medical centres" than they expected.

In recent days, indeed, the doctors, at first exuding easy confidence in their ultimate victory, have become restive. Doing violence to their Hippocratic oath, they have been threatening with excommunication any colleague who might offer what seemed to the rest of them to be unwarranted medical help. Anxious to obtain popular support for their demands, the doctors are no longer asserting that they have done everything necessary to assure due medical care for the needy during the strike.

Now they are taking the lead in pointing out the deleterious cumulative effect that delays in tests, diagnoses, treatments and operations might cause, especially to the chronically ill. Yet the doctors still won't budge from their initial positions.

Early in the strike there were indications that at least a section of the IMA would be amenable to a deal with the government at the expense of the public health system operated by the Histadrut's Kupat Holim, the country's largest. Now the Histadrut is bidding to split the IMA by conducting separate negotiations with its own doctors, who account for a majority of the profession. It is doubtful, however, whether such tactics would materially contribute to a settlement.

What is needed is for the doctors and the government to finally get down to brass tacks, in the spirit of accommodation and realism. The doctors are underpaid and overworked and the Treasury is strapped for cash. But the doctors cannot ask for the moon, and the Treasury, which manages to scrape up billions for draft-dodging yeshiva students and their families, should be able to find the money to pay the nation's healers.

There is no more time to lose. Let the parties lock themselves in and negotiate non-stop until they come up with an agreement.

EITAN'S FAREWELL

were of their own, they kept mum and failed to protest.

He was referring to a case when an officer "from the leftists" camp, from one of the Mapam kibbutzim, and three of his soldiers were accused of killing two POWs. According to Eitan, Davar journalist Nahum Barnea, "who had been hounding me with Sarid's help, knew about this incident but did not report it."

Sarid argued heatedly that Eitan was being "deliberately misleading. The officer in question was acquitted. Eitan is purposely striving to impart a false impression."

At this point the chief of staff exploded: "You are a liar." He explained that though charges against the officer were dropped, the soldiers involved in the incident were sentenced and that he had reduced the sentence. "But Sarid and his friends saw fit not to raise an outcry in this particular case, as distinct from the others."

Sarid retorted: "You are not telling the truth and if you want to use the precise term, then I'll tell you that you are a liar."

Eitan then recited an uncomplimentary poem he had written about "those who criticize and carp like Sarid." It was dedicated to Sarid with "all due respect and contempt." MKs who attended the meeting could not quote the verse verbatim, but some did recall a rhyme about "the smell of manure that comes from one who hops on his tail."

Sarid told Eitan that he hopes he is a "better carpenter than a poet (Eitan has said he would devote himself to farming and carpentry when he retires from military service.)"

The meeting ended with a farewell toast to Eitan in which Sarid also took part. "After all, Yosi is glad to see Rafal go," quipped Shalit. NRP MK Haim Druckman told Eitan that "despite all that has been said, the people of this country dearly love you."

Herut's Yosef Rom, the acting committee chairman, spoke of Eitan as "not only one of the best chiefs of staff the IDF has ever had, but also without a doubt one of the most popular and beloved officers this army ever produced."

Aluf (Res.) Mattityahu Peled, a leader of the Sheli movement, called Eitan's "roach" remarks "racist expressions" against the Arabs. He compared the terminology to that of the Nazis, who referred to Jews as rats and lice.

A medieval spectre

By BENJAMIN AKZIN

THERE IS NO real tragedy in the "poisoning" masquerade by a few hundred Arab schoolgirls with the connivance of fiercely nationalistic doctors, nor should we be surprised by the use which wider Arab circles and governments are making of this masquerade.

In a society marked by deep hostility to Israel, where actual violence is glorified, it is not to be wondered that this kind of "non-violent" struggle is being resorted to. And if the masquerade — as is not unlikely — was actually staged and orchestrated almost from the beginning, this again is understandable: those who organize sabotage and murder will not shrink from staging a tale of poisoning.

As for the lies involved, the Big Lie has been so long an instrument of Arab psychological warfare against Israel that its use in this case is almost standard behaviour.

The real tragedy lies in the seriousness with which the "enlightened world" took up the tale. Governments, the "serious" press, "responsible" TV and radio networks, not to speak of the UN Security Council and other international bodies, all set about with a serious mien to "investigate" the poisoning reports. Possibly some of these only pretend taking the matter seriously while utterly disbelieving the tale — which is almost worse, because this attitude lends prima facie credibility to something known to them to be false.

Accusations that Jews were deliberately engaged in poisoning non-Jews were a prominent feature of the darkest Middle Ages. As such, they fell into disrepute and were disdainfully discarded centuries ago.

In a way, they were even more disgusting than the blood libel: the latter accused Jews of killing individuals, while the poisoning libel accused them of trying to kill multitudes. And so, the Tzarist regime, which did not hesitate to revive the blood libel early in this century, did not dare to raise that other hoary spectre. Even the Nazis did not resort to it — not because they wouldn't have stooped to it, but because they knew no one in Europe would believe the tale, and they had no desire to be laughed at.

And now, near the century's end, the medieval tale is revived, and the enlightened world, instead of scorning it, does it the honour of taking it seriously and "investigating" its truth.

ARE WE to be grateful for small favours? The Jerusalem Post's Washington correspondent tells us that opinion in America does not believe that the Israeli government has sanctioned the poisoning, but wonders whether some "Jewish fanatics" didn't do it on their own. Thanks, indeed. It reminds me of a talk I had 60 years ago, in 1922, in Vienna, with a reactionary Russian émigré who said he was sure that not all Jews killed Christian children so as to use their blood for Passover, or even knew about it — "but didn't some secret sects, the Hasidim, do it?"

If this reaction by the Western world proves anything, it shows that there is still some demand for the Jew as a demoniacal image. And that this demand is stronger today than it was fifty and a hundred years ago. So much for progress.

And therein lies the tragedy.

I know. The secretary-general of the United Nations, the International Red Cross, the World Health Organization, the Atlanta Centre — all will report something to the effect that "no positive evidence of poisoning has been found." And possibly even a supposedly neutral, in reality a thoroughly prejudiced "international tribunal" will be formed under Mr. Sean McBride, which will, in still more ambiguous language, find that "no conclusive evidence as to the causes of the outbreak" could be es-evolution.

Of course there is no scientific proof of evolution. There is also no scientific proof of the theories of atomic physics, electricity and magnetism, or Newton's laws of motion or gravitation. In fact, Einstein showed that Newton's laws were wrong.

But fortunately our schools taught Newton's laws even though they were not scientifically proven and, in fact, turned out to be wrong. Today we have the new laws of motion and gravitation of Einstein which corrected the errors in Newton's laws. But we still teach Newton's laws in our schools because they are much simpler and adequate for all practical purposes.

Most students will never need to learn Einstein's theories of special and general relativity, while they will find the basic principles of Newton's laws useful in everything, from driving a car to astronautics.

The modern theory of what goes on inside the atom is still questioned on philosophical grounds by many people. Einstein never accepted it. But nobody has produced a better theory, and it is the only one that tells us how to use the energy of the atom, how to make transistors, how to build modern computers and how a laser works. If we waited until this quantum theory of atom physics was "scientifically proven" before teaching it to students, we would not have transistors, computers and lasers today.

A true scientist is always open to new questions and new knowledge. If an alternative theory to evolution is presented which is manifestly better, it will be accepted, but only after exhaustive criticism and questioning.

A GREAT new theory not only answers questions and poses new ones; it also shows new relations between phenomena which were previously believed to be completely different. Newton's laws not only explained the falling apple; it showed the relation between falling objects on earth and the motion of the earth itself. Maxwell's theory of electromagnetism showed that electricity, magnetism, light and radio waves were all different aspects of the same basic fields of force. Einstein's theory of general relativity showed that inertia and gravity were intimately related.

But whether for political reasons — for in today's world it is inconceivable to call a spade a spade where Arabs are concerned, no matter what they do — or for other reasons, they will all word their findings so that those who want to believe the tale will be able to continue doing so.

And therein, again, lies the tragedy.

be convinced that it is better.

The theory of evolution is an integral part of modern biology which has led to so many of the advances in modern medicine. The biology students who learned this modern approach in school went on to develop antibiotics, vaccines that eliminated diseases like polio which crippled so many of our children, open-heart surgery and, hopefully, to find the cure for cancer.

Allowing religion or ideology to interfere with teaching our students the knowledge that we have has inevitably led to disaster. Soviet biology has still not recovered from Stalin's support of the charlatan Lysenko, who attempted to impose ideology on science. Christian Scientists in America who allow religious prejudices to interfere with their use of modern medicine are denied its benefits.

Somewhere in our schools there may be a young student who will find the cure for cancer or develop new strains of plants that revolutionize agriculture and feed the hungry people of the world. Our schools must give him the tools he needs for his future work by teaching him the best of our secular scientific knowledge.

There is no shortage of religious education in Israel today, and my student who is interested can learn everything written in the Bible about the creation. We should not mix religion with science.

READERS' LETTERS

FREEDOM OF RELIGION

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post, Sir, — I left Canada to live in Israel when I became a second-class citizen in Quebec by virtue of language. I arrived in Israel only to discover that I am a second-class citizen by virtue of religion since Conservative and Reform Jews have no rights in Israel.

I could live free as a Jew in Canada than I can here, since my synagogue and my rabbi were recognized by the federal and provincial governments. All religious ceremonies, weddings and funerals included, could be performed by all registered rabbis whatever their denomination.

I have stood at the ramparts for Soviet Jewry and Jews in Arab lands. For years, I fought the propaganda battle for the State of Israel. Who will fight for me now that I need help?

Where are all the Israelis who, like me, respect the Orthodox but have no desire to follow their dictates? Where are all those who have enjoyed services in Conservative, Reform and Reconstructionist synagogues abroad? Where are the Knesset members who know that it is unjust to live, as we do, under the dictatorship of the rabbinate, an organization which, if unchecked, will become more powerful than the government itself.

Jews were always at the forefront of campaigns abroad to separate state and religion. It is a tragedy that, in Israel, religious intolerance is encouraged and protected by the government, and it is sad that the Orthodox feel so threatened by Conservative and Reform synagogues. But it is sadder still that the people of Israel, who are ready to do battle for their country in time of war, are so apathetic when their rights are denied them.

BIRDS' FLIGHT

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post, Sir, — On March 17, there appeared a news item headed, "The birds have left Christmas Island." It made the assertion that this was the first time that birds had left an island.

Allow me to correct you on this point. It was recorded during the Second World War that the bird population of Alderney, one of the Channel Islands belonging to England but overrun by the Nazis in 1940, left in a body, or rather a flight, and did not return until five years had elapsed.

This fact was mentioned in the reports published in The Observer of May 31 and June 7, 1981.

NUCLEAR POWER

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post, Sir, — In his letter of March 25, Professor Alvin Radkowsky writes: "In nearly 40 years of peaceful uses of nuclear energy, there has never been a casualty." This disregards the effects of low dosages of radiation such as are routinely emitted from nuclear reactors and which cause higher incidences of leukemia and cancer in areas surrounding the reactors (e.g. Shippingport, Pa.; Big Rock Point, Mich.; Hanford Atomic Works, and others).

Professor Radkowsky also states: "Nuclear power avoids pollution." What of the disposal of radioactive wastes? There exists no solution to this problem. At present, wastes are stored "temporarily" in the hope that a permanent solution may be found some day. Furthermore, there is a serious thermal pollution problem since nuclear reactors depend on enormous volumes of water for cooling.

Finally, Professor Radkowsky writes: "Research into solar power has been practically discontinued in the U.S.A. after huge expenditures." In contrast, several studies have been made and show that sources of energy other than nuclear do exist. Studies include "A low energy strategy for the United Kingdom," edited by Gerald Leach for the International Institute for Environment and Development; "Energy future," edited by R. Stobaugh and D. Yarkin of the Harvard Business School; and "The U.K. energy problem," by Sir Martin Ryle from the Cavendish Laboratory, Cambridge.

TELEREVIEW

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post, Sir, — Philip Gillon's self-satisfied reaction (March 25) to my letter of criticism was, of course, predictable and what I wrote in my article on "The quest for a more wholesome state" (March 1) was clearly above his swollen head.

He is, at least, consistent in opposing the national consensus. Thus, from his vantage point somewhere to the left of Sheli, Mr. Gillon may well consider me a "right-winger." Such a balanced judgement, coming from such a political pundit, can only be regarded as the highest form of compliment.

Over the past few weeks, dozens of people have contacted Philip Gillon's arch-critic in person or by telephone to express their wholehearted agreement with his stand. A few even rebuked him for his moderation. Modesty, as your columnist would say, forbids me to identify the recipient of these congratulations, but I can disclose that his brilliant sagacity is only matched by the dazzling discernment of these many kindred spirits.

May I propose that The Post, as a demonstration of its fairness and impartiality, allow other staff members to relieve Mr. Gillon of the Televue from time to time. Not long ago, I recall, Alex Berlyne proved to be an admirable, though all-too-brief replacement. Indeed, as I once suggested, perhaps he and Gillon should occasionally change places, so that the latter's social and political comments might then appear under the more appropriate heading, "With prejudice."
